

How we use cookies

We use information generated by cookies to help us recognise that you have accessed our site previously, and to understand your interests, preferences, and how you like to engage with us. We also use cookies to make particular features work, for example enabling you to remain logged in.

Cookies help us know what products and services you like, and we may match them with personal information so we can send you the most relevant communication and special offers. Some adverts may appear on third party websites and Google as well.

To disable cookies

Most browsers let you adjust the settings to tell you when you are offered a cookie so you can decide to accept it or not. You may disable or block all cookies but that may cause some features of our Online Channels to not work correctly.
